

Only, they tell me, they will lose their trade.

J. O. Ferris, rector of the Episcopal church in Trinidad, who offended his fashionable congregation by going to Ludlow after the slaughter last spring and helping to remove from the hole in which they had burned and smothered to death the bodies of 13 women and children, has since been FORCED TO RESIGN and another minister, who went with Ferris is keeping his pulpit in spite of the strenuous objections of some members of his congregation.

"We don't want sympathy," explained Tommy Denison, one of the strikers.

"They can save it for the coal companies or for the militiamen, if they ever come back down here. We'll fight till we win this strike, and we don't care what people think about us.

"They call us anarchists and traitors, but I say we're trying to get our rights and nothing else. We've been robbed and ground down for years, and if the state of Colorado wants to restore law and order, let it start by giving us some way that we can live our lives and earn our wages the way we want to."

MYSTERIOUS "LACK OF PROSECUTION" BRINGS SENSIBAUGH CASE TO A FINISH

Through a mysterious "lack of prosecution" the case against "Dr." W. C. Sensibaugh, former head of the Rev. Elmer L. Williams' vice squad, was dismissed in the East Chicago avenue municipal court yesterday.

Sensibaugh was accused of betraying 19-year-old Myrtle Santay, who had been paroled to him by the morals court, and of having an illegal operation performed on the girl after the betrayal.

The case against Sensibaugh, who has had the backing of many prominent and respectable church workers of the North Side, had been continued seven times, sometimes on one excuse, sometimes on another.

When the case was called before Judge Ryan yesterday Detectives Canney and Murphy, who were supposed to be prosecuting the case, were not in court.

The old complaint against Sensibaugh had been changed, so that a new one had to be signed before the case could be proceeded with. Canney and Murphy were not there to sign the complaint. The representative of the state's attorney refused to sign it himself and asked Myrtle Santay to do it.

The girl refused to do so. She burst into tears when asked why.

"I won't sign it," she sobbed. "I hate Sensibaugh just as much as ever. He betrayed me when I trusted him. He took away my faith in man and in religion, for all that he did to me he did under the cloak of religion. I'd like to see him prosecuted. I'd like to see him punished, not only because he wronged me, but because it might stop him wronging some other girl.

"But I'm not going to suffer any longer. Ever since this case started, last Sept. 18, I have been held either in the hospital or in jail as the complaining witness.

"Sensibaugh has been at liberty under bond; Mrs. Anna Stejeskal, the midwife he took me to for the operation, has been free on bond. I, the one who was wronged, am the only person who has been behind bars since the case started.

"If I sign this new complaint I suppose there will be another continuance and then I'll be held in jail again—because I am the complaining witness against the good Sensibaugh. I won't do it. I want to be free again,
